

© MERATH

CHILD PROTECTION

PROTECT VULNERABLE CHILDREN THIS CHRISTMAS

Jesus came to earth as a vulnerable infant: He was born to a humble family in a humble way, He was a refugee child in a foreign land, then returned to grow up under unjust rulers.

It is obvious in the Bible that children have a unique place in Jesus' heart, and there is something deeply unbearable about seeing a little child suffer.

That is why protecting vulnerable children is embedded in everything we do. Whether we help keep a family full and warm during winter, stand with a family newly displaced from their home, or support child friendly spaces and education centers, we believe we are protecting children from past traumas, present risks, and future harms.

This Christmas, we need your support to continue this work, at a time when children in our region keep becoming increasingly vulnerable.

© MERATH

“ Meet Maha

Deciding to leave our beautiful village in the South was very difficult. We left everything behind, crying while closing the door, wondering if we will be back or not.

We never thought we would be displaced for so long.

If we have to stay here through the winter, it will be a disaster.

We don't have furniture or winter clothes, and we ran out of savings.

Thank God, MERATH provided us with food, mattresses, and blankets. It gives us a sense of security. There is something very comforting in knowing that someone is here for you.

The hardest is for the children, though. Their school closed and they are not receiving any education. They are sitting at home, wasting precious time, and they feel scared and lost.

Our hope is to be back on time to celebrate Christmas at home.

PROTECT A CHILD